HYGEINIC.—There is a disease called ennui, which affects only the rich and luxurious, and is characterized by dullness and languor of spirits, and inanimate unconcern in those suffering from its attack. For this disease, however, as for most others, there are remedies, and they are as various and numerous as the practitioners who recommend their use, but an immediate and specific cure is guaranteed to all laboring from the depressing effects of ennui by an investment in real estate, and a residence in this city. The enlivening emotions and exciting feelings continually and continuously engendered in the minds of the inhabitants of Alexandria by the rapid and varied succession of the Congressional reconstructing movements—the Constitutional Amendment—the Military Force Bill—the Wilson joint resolution declaring all civil offices in this Arcadia vacant—the Stevens scheme—annexing this city and county to the District of Columbia—possess revivifying influences and stimulating charms that need only to be known in order to secure an immense increase to it's population.

MR. TUCKER'S DEMAND.—Mr. Geo. Tucker, the Commonwealth's Attorney for Fairfax county, for whom the colored people of this city and many from abroad, were induced by evil disposed persons to believe they had a legal right to vote on Tuesday last, as one of the candidates for the Mayoralty, accompanied by Mr. Charles Whittlesey and some hundred or so colored men, called upon Mayor Latham, this morning, at the Mayor's Office, and demanded the possession of the seal of the corporation, and the keys of the public buildings. He was, of course, at once, and peremptorily, but politely and quietly, informed that his demands would not be complied with, at which he seemed not at all surprised, and immediately left the office.

THE RAILROAD ACCIDENT.—The accident to the passenger train on the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, last Wednesday, near Rockfish depot, heretofore mentioned, resulted in the precipitation down an embankment some twenty or thirty feet high, of the express, baggage, mail and one passenger car. The express car was smashed to pieces. Fortunately no person was injured.

THE MARKET, this morning, was tolerably supplied, but we have no change to notice in prices. The butchers had excellent beef, mutton, lamb, pork and veal—at previous rates. The fish venders sell fish, at the rates quoted during the week. Vegetables, such as kale, celery, parsnips, &c., are also without change. Eggs are abundant at from 22 to 25 cts. per dozen.

MUNICIPAL OFFICERS SWORN IN.—Mayor Latham administered the oaths of office, today, to several of the officers of the corporation, elected on Tuesday last, and some of them entered immediately upon the duties of their respective offices.

AN ALEXANDRIAN ELECTED READER.—Mr. Isreal Sanger, late of this city, has been elected at the Synagogue in Norfolk. He went to his new home well recommended for the position.

FISH AND OYSTERS.—Fish and oysters are now, from some unexplained cause, very scarce in this market, and the rates at which they are selling are consequently tolerably well up.

FIRE.—The alarm of fire, last night, about eight o'clock, was occasioned by the illumination of the sky caused by the conflagration then in progress in Washington city.

FAIR.—The Friendship Fair now attracts nightly to the Assembly Rooms, the young people of the city, and a long evening can be very agreeably whiled away there.

MR. SLATER'S stand, in market, this morning, was ornamented with beautiful flowers, in pots, which attracted much attention.

MESSRS. WITMER & SLAYMAKER have one of the finest stores in the city; polite and attentive clerks, and excellent goods, of a variety that cannot fail to please any taste, which are sold at low figures. Among our leading dry goods houses this firm stands with the foremost.

[REPORTED FOR THE GAZETTE.]

THE REPUBLICAN ASSOCIATION—MUNICIPAL ELECTION—MANDATE TO CONGRESS—RECONSTRUCTION—RETROCESSION, &c., &c.—Last night the "Union Republican Association of Alexandria"—composed of about four hundred blacks and eight or ten whites—held a meeting at the Lyceum Hall, over which Josiah Millard (white) presided.

It having been ascertained that of the forty names appended to the "Constitution" only eight had paid the initiation fee, and that the association owed, for use of room, at $5 per night, forty dollars, thus leaving a deficit of thirty-two dollars, a call was made on the brethren to pay up, and a motion was made by Geo. Tucker (white) to permit any and all who wanted to join the association to do so, and that no regular initiation fee should be charged, but each new member might contribute whatever he pleased.

This measure was strenuously opposed by "the old wheel horse of Democracy," W. L. Penn, who thought that by thus throwing wide open the door, the objects for which the association had been formed would be defeated, its exclusiveness invaded, and the "Rebs" rushing in, would secure the fruit for which the originators of the Association had been so assiduously striving.

R. D. Beckly (col'd) seconded the views of Mr. Penn, and it being evident that the sentiment of the majority of the blacks, at least, was opposed to a general commingling, Tucker withdrew his proposition, and it was determined that any and all who want to join shall hand in their names to a committee appointed for the purpose, and composed of Beckly (col'd.) Burke (col'd.) Penn (white), and two others —names not known.

The preliminary business having been thus arranged, the meeting was edified by a short discourse, upon things in general, from George Tucker, who, during his remarks, accused the Southern people of practicing dishonesty, rascality, villainy, and sundry other like refined acquirements, in order to retain power in their hands. He considered President Johnson an arch traitor and semi-rebel, &c., and asserted that the Supreme Court was a superannuated body, unfit for the times. Then descending to "home matters," he informed his audience that he had been sworn in as "Mayor," and that to-day he should demand from Mayor Latham the office, seal, &c., which, however, he took occasion to say, he did not expect would be given up, and as he was not able to take possession, by himself, upon a refusal on Mayor Latham's part to vacate in his (Tucker's) favor, he (Tucker) should quietly retire, and then, said the speaker, oracularly, "there will be something else." Having thus concluded, the speaker descended from the rostrum, but in a few moments ascended again, and produced a preamble and series of resolutions, covering an immense sheet of paper, and setting forth that whereas no State governments exist in the late Confederate States, they having dissolved their connexion with the Union by the act of war, and whereas they are now held as conquered territory, therefore Congress is the only source from whence laws for their government can emanate; that the existing State governments are no governments at all, &c., &c.; therefore Congress shall not adjourn until laws are passed that will entirely, and forever, dispose of the "rebels," and prevent them from holding or exercising any power in the State or General Government, and that we, "the Union Republican Association of Alexandria" will not cast our votes for any man for Congress who favors an adjournment until the objects set forth in these resolutions are carried out!!—(Now then Congress cannot adjourn on Monday.)

W. L. Penn objected to the last resolution, considering it harsh and rather ridiculous. He very archly suggested that we, the "Republican Association of Alexandria," did not have much say in the election of Congressmen, just now, and thought that the resolution might produce a laugh at the expense of the Association.

John Hauxhurst (signed in the famous memorial, John Harry Werst) was in favor of a modification of the language, and Lorenzo D. Harmon (white) proposed that instead of a resolution there should be a memorial.

R. D. Beckly (col'd.) wanted the language strong and emphatic. He did not want to be left half clothed with power, as General Grant had left General Lee halt whipped; he was in favor of going "the whole hog."

Geo. Tucker would accept the modification proposed by his friend Hauxhurst, (which was to strike out the part about not voting for Congressmen, &c.,) but at the same time he did not believe in milk and water. He then proceeded to give in his experience of what happened on election day; said he had been first "joustled" (intended for jostled, it is supposed,) on one side, and "joustled" on the other, and then "sqez'd;" to be be sure there was no disturbance or violence, but a great deal of "joustling!"

W. L. Penn advocated a modification of the language of the last resolution, which was finally agreed to, and the preamble and resolutions then adopted with but four or five dissenting voices.

T. Henly (white) next moved the appointment of a committee of five to proceed to Washington, to urge upon the Judiciary Committee of the Senate the immediate passage of the bill to "re-concede" Alexandria to the District.

Hauxhurst put in a slight protest: Beckly favored the motion; Henly insisted upon "re-concession;" Hodgkins thought there was such a thing as running this association in the ground, and that Congress would presently get very tired of being waited upon by committees from associations that wielded so little influence, and had nothing to do with electing Congressmen—they would become disgusted; but the speech had no effect, and the resolution for "re-concession" was adopted, and the chair appointed R. Bell, sr., W. N. Berkley, J. M. Stewart, L. D. Harmon, and Thos. Davy as the Committee.

These appointments gave dissatisfaction to many, and Mr. Hauxhurst stated his objections, first, that not one of the committee named were present in the meeting, or ever took part in them, and secondly, that the working class was not represented.

The Chair said that he had appointed property men on the committee, supposing that they were most interested, and would have most influence.

Beckly wanted the "colored body politic," as he said, represented, whereupon Parker and Strange (col'd.) were added, and then the President of the meeting; and, finally, Henly proposed to put the whole meeting on the Committee.

Mr. Hauxhurst suggested that the proposer of the resolution should unquestionably be chairman of the committee, but Henly peremptorily declined to have anything to do with it. Beckly also declined a proffer to be placed on the list, and then the meeting adjourned.

A SLANDER NAILED.—In the Senate of North Carolina, a few days since the following proceeding took place:

Mr. Clarke, of Edgecombe, asked leave to notice some very gross charges on his constuents, contained in a speech, delivered in the Congress of the United States, on the 12th of Feb., 1867, by the Hon. Wm. D. Kelley, and read from the speech the following extract:

"Near Tarboro', two children, girls, one eleven and the other thirteen years of age, were last summer apprenticed to their former owner. The girls' mother had formerly been whipped to death under the orders of the wife of the man to whom they are now apprenticed, then the master and owner of the murdered woman. Recent information shows that these children, who are still held as apprentices, are nearly starved and not half clad: the only garment they wore, while picking cotton in the inclement weather of December, was a straight gown, short in the skirt, and with short sleeves, with neither shoes, stockings, nor bonnets."

I represent the people and locality alluded to in this extract, and I state here, that it may go throughout the length and breadth of this land, that there is not a word of truth in the above; and I never heard of any circumstance or rumor upon which such a charge could be fabricated, and my colleagues in the other branch of the Legislature, Messrs. Baker and Woodward, join me in this total and authoritive denial of this foul slander, and we invite and challenge any investigation into it."

The charges are made in the Halls of Congress to provoke hostile legislation.

CHARLES E MOSS, one of the most Radic contributors to the most Radical of papers, the Anti-Slavery Standard, denounces the Military Reconstruction measure most strenuously, declaring that it places "the lives, property and interests of one third of the inhabitants of the American Republic in the power of General Grant;" and the writer immediately adds the following: "The great, boasting Republican party, after six years of vacillation and misrule, has at last declared, so far as language of legislation can declare, that the American people are incapable of self government, and that General Grant alone can save the nation. For, say what we may, if no civil government can be devised for the States recently in rebellion, the same will be claimed to hold good throughout the North in less than three years."

MR. SUMNER, on Tuesday, gave notice of his intention to introduce the following bills:

"Bill declaratory of a republican form of government in the rebel States, and to provide for the restoration of those States to their practical relations in the Union.

Bill to prescribe a form of oath to sustain a republican government in the rebel States."

This is at least more direct than to require us to grope about in the dark for the sort of constitution that will please Mr. Sumner.—Richmond Enquirer.

HOW NORTHERN MEN ARE TREATED.—Several "Northern Men," who have recently inspected lands in this section, have declared that they are treated better by the people here than they are at home. They express surprise that no charge is made for horse feed, lodging, or meals, when they stop at private houses in the country. They say the people at home have very false notions in regard to us. The persistent falsehoods of thirty years, of course, have made an impression which it will take time to correct.—Fredericksburg News.
